ENCOURAGING THE NEXT GENERATION OF GAELIC TEACHERS

Bòrd na Gàidhlig will be visiting high schools in Lewis and in Harris this week, spreading the word about their campaign to encourage more young people to consider Gaelic teaching as a future career.

During the visit, the Gaelic teacher recruitment officer will be visiting 4 schools that offer high school education do S1 and S2 in Lewis: Back School, Shawbost School, Lochs School and Lionel School; as well as Sir E Scott High School in Harris.

During her visit, the recruitment officer will give a presentation to pupils about the opportunities within Gaelic Medium Education to try and encourage them to go on to become Gaelic teachers in the future.

“Its very important that young people know there are lots of future opportunities within Gaelic Education” the recruitment officer, Morna MacLeod said.

“Its during high school that many young people start to consider their career paths. Therefore visiting high schools, to keep pupils informed of the opportunities there are in Gaelic teaching is integral to the Gabh an Cothrom campaign. We appreciate that the local authorities and schools are willing to let us speak to pupils.
